“ We were children of the sixties. She'd gone to Woodstock. I'd camped out in Greenwich Village. We were a couple for awhile. We'd just become new believers in Jesus Christ and had that bond. She told me in French that Jesus Christ had changed her life. That was her anthem, and I remember it well. 'Jesus Christ a change ma vie' she'd say with such delight and joy. We separated, but reconnected shortly before her passing. Now I treasure those email exchanges. And I treasure her memory. But I wish we'd reconnected sooner. Adieu, ma chere amie.
