He worked in various areas throughout his life. From general office to the food service industry, he was a valued employee and was popular with both his co-workers and his supervisors. He worked hard and played harder. No one could compete with his beloved Oakland Raiders during a football game.

Jesse loved Berkeley. He embraced it. You could always find him walking around the flea market, talking to people. People would recognize him from 20 years ago and they would stand around chatting for an hour. He was a very kind and generous man.
